Another Pioneer Dead.

George W. Grubb, one of the pioneers of Lafayette county, died at his home in Odessa Friday night, January 29, 1904, after a brief illness of congestion of the bowels. He and his daughter, Miss Alma, moved from the farm northeast of Oak Grove to Odessa last autumn. Having worked hard all his life he rented his large farm and decided to retire from active business. The news of his sudden death was a shock to his many friends here. He was a man whom everyone liked. The funeral services were held at Pleasant Prairie church Sunday. It was preached by Rev. E. H. Gardner of Park Hill, after which the interment occurred in the cemetery nearby.

Mr. Grubb was born in Loudoun county, Virginia, Feb. 2, 1831. He had been a farmer all his life. In 1852 he came with John W. Conrad to Missouri and settled in Lafayette county. The two came by land in wagons and were forty-two days on the road.

Mr. Grubb remained in Missouri until 1853, when he returned to Virginia, and on Feb. 23, 1854, he was united in marriage to Miss Jane A. Conrad. His wife was born in Loudoun county, Va., August 18, 1832. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Grubb, four of whom are living, viz: Mary E. M., wife of A. D. Neer; Lucella J. E. Fishback; Sterling Lee Grubb and Miss Alma Beatrice Grubb.

In May, 1854 Mr. Grubb and his bride returned to Missouri. They came on the train from their home to Wheeling, West Virginia, at which place they took passage on a steamboat and came by way of the Ohio.

Dragging Pains

2835 Keeley St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groin. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

Mississippi and Missouri rivers to Wellington, Lafayette county.

He purchased a farm three miles south of Napoleon from Major Bryant Sanders and James U. Ewing. In an early day, Napoleon was called Lisbon. That place and Wellington were great shipping points for the Lafayette county farmers who grew hemp extensively and shipped it on steamboats to the St. Louis and New Orleans markets. But very little of the land was under fence and people traveled to their neighbors on a straight line instead of having highways as in the present day. The mail was carried on horseback once or twice a week from Lexington to Independence. Mr. Grubb very often sold cattle to the freighters who used them as oxen to haul goods across the plains.

Mr. Grubb was not in the army during the civil war, but his sympathies were with the South from start to finish, and two of his brothers were killed while fighting for the Southern cause. During the war he was taken to Lexington along with several of his neighbors and made to take the oath of allegiance to sustain the union and then they returned to their farms and were not molested during the remainder of the unpleasantness—Oak Grove Banner.

John Kinzey met with a bad accident at the Beatty mine Saturday. He was caught under falling slate and coal and had his right hand badly mashed. He will be unable to do any work for some time. His many friends much regret this misfortune, and all hope for his speedy recovery.—Advance.

We do not give ourselves birth; we can not bring ourselves up; we are powerless to educate ourselves; we can not shut out the snapping force of circumstances; we cannot free ourselves from the common perils of existence; we can not prolong our lives beyond the moment fixed by the decree registered on high.—Rev. S. D. Burrell.

God is the greatest critic of all. It is he who by his providence shakes both the heavens and the earth in order that the things which can not be shaken may remain. God shakes off from religion some elements or ideas which were not vital to it, and everything that can be shaken must surely fall away.—Rev. S. M. Clarke.

We are social beings; we were created to live in society. No man is sufficient unto himself. We are mutually dependent on one another. As an injury to one organ involves a shock to the entire human system, so should the community at large feel a practical sympathy for their fellow-beings in any grievance oppressing them.—Cardinal Gibbons.

There are times in the life of nations when men are overpowered by a vague yet deep presentiment of impending danger, and, if I am not mistaken this appears to be the situation of the hour. Everyone seems to realize that we are standing face to face with an impending calamity, and this calamity is socialism preparing, organizing and conspiring.—Bishop Matz.

Force is always invincible, power needs no demonstration. What we see is but the effect of what has been done. Sometimes the results we look for on certain causes are entirely different from our expectation. Icebergs float south in spite of the gulf stream flowing opposite, because the deep Arctic current bears their ponderous submerged part by its strength. Hidden power exerts itself as God directs, and his mighty will is wrought upon mankind as well as upon the face of nature.—Rev. C. O. Jones.

F. E. B.

We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February—Feb.—means freeze everybody, and that man looked frozen in his ulcer. It was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that stays, the warmth that rescues from head to foot, all over the body. We could have told him from personal knowledge that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives permanent warmth, it invigorates the blood and speeds it along through artery and vein, and really fits men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens the system, and all its benefits are lasting. There may be a suggestion in this for you.

Death of Mrs. Mary R. Belt.

Died, at her home in Higginsville, Jan. 29, 1904, after a brief illness, Mrs. Mary R. Belt, aged 78 years.

The remains were interred at Oak Grove cemetery south of this city on Sunday. She was born in Alexandria, Va., and came to this county 28 years ago living for a number of years on a farm near Aulville. A few years ago she came to this city and lived with her daughter. She leaves four children: Alfred C. of Purcell, I. T.; Miss Lizzie of Kansas City, and Esther and Kate of this city. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.—Jeffersonian.

Death of B. A. Johnson.

Word was received here Sunday night of the death of B. A. Johnson, a Kansas, N. M., aged about 47 years. Mr. Johnson left Odessa only a few days ago to try the dry climate of the southwest for tuberculosis, from which he was suffering. The change proved too great for his shattered physical condition, and he succumbed to the Grim Reaper only a short while after arriving at his destination. Mr. Johnson was for many years C. & A. station agent in this city. He was one of the best clerical men on the road and performed his duties satisfactorily to his employers. He was a quiet, reserved man, strictly honest, and had many friends. He had been a member of the Masonic lodge for many years. A delegation of Masons from Odessa met the corpse at Kansas City, and C. L. Frost and Arch Rex accompanied the body to Kirksville, where it was interred. Mr. Johnson leaves a wife and five children with whom the entire community sympathizes.—Odessa Ledger.

Rev. J. W. Wallace Dead.

The death of the Rev. J. W. Wallace, which has been expected for several months, occurred Monday at his home in Independence. He was 82 years old on November 29 last, and his last public appearance was on Thanksgiving day, when he took part in the union services at the Christian church. On the evening of that day he was "stricken" with paralysis and since then has been confined to his bed, gradually sinking.

Mr. Wallace was the father of William H. Wallace, of Kansas City.

Death of G. W. Grubbe.

George Washington Grubbe, one of the most highly respected citizens of Odessa, died at his home in the east part of Odessa Friday evening, January 29. He was born Feb. 2, 1831, and resided many years until about three months ago near Pleasant Prairie church. He was married February 23, 1854, to Miss Mary Anne Conrad, who preceded him to the grave. Of this union five children were born, four of whom are living: Mrs. Mary E. Neer; Mrs. Lucile J. Fishback; Sterling L. Grubbe and Miss Alma B. Grubbe. Mr. Grubbe moved to Odessa last October, and during his short residence he made many warm friends here. He was a Christian gentleman of strict integrity and pleasant demeanor. He was kind and considerate to everyone and generous to those in distress. His remains were taken to Pleasant Prairie church and the funeral services held, conducted by Rev. E. H. Gardner.—Odessa Ledger.

ARGENTINE FOSSIL BEDS.

Remains of Extinct Animals Frequently Found in South America.

Prof. William B. Scott, Ph. D., of Princeton university, lectured at the art gallery the other evening before the department of geology, Brooklyn Institute, on "The Great Argentine Fossil Beds of South America," says the Brooklyn Eagle. Prof. Scott visited these beds in connection with the various expeditions sent out by Princeton, making his last trip last season, so the information that he brought was the latest. In addition to the discovery of fossil remains the expedition discovered that the southern Andes are of much later geological date than has heretofore been supposed—the Pliocene; that Patagonia presents the appearance of a prehistoric Pompeii in that it is covered with volcanic ash in the same way.

The beds are wonderfully rich in fossils. Before the bridge was erected between the American continents animal life in South America was much like that of Australia, but when Central America was formed the northern animals migrated and some of the migrants existed much longer in their new home than in the north. Such was the saber toothed tiger, of which extinct horror there are four perfect specimens (or nearly so), in the world, one of them at the American museum in Manhattan.

A strange thing about many of these strange looking skeletons was the fact that their tusks were formed of the incisors instead of the canine teeth. In many cases the latter are extremely small. It requires great care to get the fossils out of the surrounding bed and generally the material immediately investing the object is very hard, being composed of volcanic ash and 60 per cent of carbonate of lime, probably the deposit of rain-water. Another striking observation was that fossils found in Santa Cruz beds are small, while those found in the Pampean are large.

ROMANCE OF A COUNTESS.

American Girl Who Has Acquired Both Money and Title.

Cora, countess of Stafford, the beautiful American woman, is on the point of being married for the third time. Before her second marriage to the earl of Stafford—who survived it only seven months—the countess was the widow of Colgate, the American soap millionaire, and the great wealth he had left behind was hers until she became a woman of title, when, with the exception of about $1,000,000, it passed to her daughter, who herself has only lately married.

Martin Thomas Kennard, to whom the countess is about to be married, is a distinguished Englishman. In appearance he is dark and of very athletic appearance, being rather thickset than tall. Exploring expeditions in all parts of Africa, and big game hunting in China, India, Canada, Africa and other parts of the world have been one of his greatest interests. With such tastes Mr. Kennard has not spent much time in England.

His London flat is remembered as the scene of many interesting dinners, whilst his little tea parties have often been among the events of a smart London season. At this flat, which for London is quite large, just off Park Lane, Mr. Kennard has some of the wonderful trophies of his antiques, among them being a collection of Queen Anne furniture of which Mr. Kennard is very proud. His collecting hobby is also known to include curious bric-a-brac.

It was a pleasure trip rather than a hunting excursion that took the bridegroom-elect to India where as one of the distinguished guests at the Durbar he first met Cora, countess of Stafford.

Japanese in Corea.

There are at present about 15,000 Japanese settlers in Corea. In the third century that country belonged to Japan, having been conquered by the Empress Jingo. In the years 1594 to 1598 Corea was again subject to Japan.
